Never Lose Your WHY...

At the heart of every action is a driving force. Yet, somehow as humans we tend to live life forgetting to question how we spend our time.

Often we wake up each day, begin our daily routine, and habit takes over. At times we can become a bit robotic. Wake, eat, work, dinner, kids sports practice, repeat. We get caught up in the to do list effect. Don't settle for living life in to do list mode!

Give yourself permission to pause, reflect, and ask yourself: are my daily actions reflective of the values and people I hold dear? Do my actions prioritize the people and values I claim to have?

Get out of town, break away from the routine and reflect. Prioritize your time and the things you put your energy into. Are they worth it? Create goals to make time for the things that really matter, or just bring you joy.

Priorities this summer:

- Cook together with my family*
- Make art*
- Listen to my Grandma's stories*
- Have a campfire with friends*
- Go to the pool once a week with the kids*
- Build a tree house for the kids*

In April of 2022, my husband, our son, and I were fortunate enough to join our family on the trip of a lifetime. Eight of us piled into a Mercedes Sprinter van and set off on an eastward journey to Maine.

It was a whirlwind week of long drives and breathtaking sightseeing, but the beauty of Acadia National Park and the coast of Maine was truly some of the most stunning I've ever witnessed. While the primary goal was to help my husband's aunt achieve her dream of visiting all 50 states, we all ended up experiencing a trip that none of us will ever forget.

A few years ago, my mom and I took a trip to Arizona to celebrate my college graduation—it was my first time out west. Experiencing the desert landscapes, red rocks, and sweeping views I'd only ever seen on TV or in photos was surreal. What struck me most was how quickly everything changed after just a short plane ride. One moment we were in our familiar corner of Illinois, and the next, we were surrounded by scenery that felt like another world.

That trip didn't just mark a milestone in my life—it opened my eyes to how much more there is to explore beyond the places we call home.

At the beginning of October, I met up with some of my closest high school friends in New York City. It was such a fun and exciting trip where we simply explored all that the city has to offer in a short week. My favorite things to explore were the endless choices of cafes, restaurants, shows, museums and shops. One of my fondest memories of the trip, was when we were enjoying our iced lattes and bagels in Central Park catching up on each other's lives after so many years apart. It's safe to say I need to plan another trip after only scratching the surface of what NYC has to offer!

My most memorable vacations were childhood trips to Walt Disney World with my parents and younger brother. As a kid, visiting the theme parks felt like stepping into a different magical world. From the moment we arrived, everything was so bright, colorful and exciting. We walked down Main Street, saw Cinderella's Castle, and got to meet classic characters like Mickey & Minnie Mouse. We would wake up super early every day and try to jam pack as many rides, shows and experiences as we could into our time at the different theme parks. My favorite show was always live action Beauty and the Beast. We enjoyed collecting pins and autographs from our favorite characters and eating all the sweet Mickey shaped treats. Years later, my brother and I still talk about these childhood memories and how much fun we had with our parents.
